Utah Commandery No. 1 Knights Templar met yesterday at noon in the Marken Knights Templar in America, and of drinking his health. There was a good attendance of members of Utah commandery and also a number of visitors from sister commanderies. Appropriate calculations were not the work of God, it would have been the wildest as well as the silliest undertake ing that any mad man could have dreamed of. It succeeded beyond measure. This success is the most decisive miracle in proof of the divinity of christ.

The twelve fishermen set out after receiving the commission. They went forth, bearing the cross, hitherto an object of shame, and succeeded in a few years in conquering the world to got years in conquering the world to got years in conquering that cross in the strongholds of pasanism; and ever since, paganism, faisily wounded, has been struggling at the foot of the cross.

Christmas has come, is gone, and is coming. The services in the churches chemost part of a very choracte character. The attendance generally was correspond.

The conclusion follows, if Christman believed in the that the whole world has embraced it. Therefore it is credible, either naturally by itself or supernaturally by the action of God, namely miracles. Miracles! The infide! scorns to admit their possibility. "How is this," asks St. Augustine, "that in ages of highly cultured intellectuality, the world admitted, without miracles, a doctrine which you yourself proclaim to be incredible? Will you admit that the Christian doctrine is by itself worthy of faith." Then why not embrace it by your faith? In either case, therefore, the unbelieve presses the conclusion all the most forcibity against himself as he proclaims, with a louder and louder volce, that it is beneath his reason to believe in the divinity of the Christian religion.

Salt Lake, Ogden, Prove and Butt on the range of the Salt Lake and For Douglas Shotgun club, both live birds and bluerocks being used. Messre Matt Browning, Bigelow, Ensign, Beck-er and John Browning, of the Ogden team, came down on the early morning train and here were joined by J. E. Daniels, of Provo, Cowan, of Butte, and the Salt Lake boys. It was a very enjoyable meet and some good scores were made. The day was perfect. Time was called shortly after 10

Time was called shortly after 10 o'clock.

The first shoot of the day was at ten live pigeons each, distance thirty yards, from four traps. These traps were of an improved character and the passage across the boxes of metal balls as soon as the spring was released compelled the birds to fiv. Good pigeons had been secured and the sport was first-class. In the first live bird match Cowan, of Butte, and Tremayne led the score, tying on eight, while in the second Matt Browning knocked down his ten straight, taking first money. The latter also made the best combined score on the two shoots, killing seventeen birds. Cowan and Tremayne were scored on the first, again tying on eighter pigeons. The score of the first shoot was as follows:
